The American Library Association's (ALA) Public Policy and Advocacy team has been researching incoming members since before the election, with an eye toward connections with libraries

Now ALA is asking leaders like you in the library world to share your intelligence about Members-elect. If you have experience with these officials on the state or local level, we would appreciate it if you would share your knowledge with the PPA team.

- Were any officials supportive of school libraries?
- Were they a Friend of the Library? A Board of Trustee member?
- Do they have a librarian family member?
- Have you read articles in local media that mention support for libraries or education?

All of your background intelligence (even on elected officials who are not in your district or state) will be helpful for ALA to begin to build relationships on Capitol Hill. A list of these incoming members can be found here:
